

ZSL Marsh Award for Marine and Freshwater Conservation

Winners

- 2024 Nick Graham, Lancaster University, for fundamental research into coral reef ecosystems, climate impacts, food security and fisheries, and social-ecological systems
- 2023 Nicole Esteban, University of Swansea, for outstanding research into the impacts of climate change on nesting sea turtles and marine protected area management
- 2022 Hollie Booth, University of Oxford, for research into fisheries bycatch, specifically of sharks and rays in Indonesia, and contributions to national and international policy
- 2021 Charles Tyler, University of Exeter, for outstanding contributions to environmental ecotoxicology and aquatic animal health
- 2020 Steven Cooke, Carleton University, for pioneering work quantifying the consequences of recreational, commercial and aboriginal fishing practices on fish and fisheries
- 2019 David Sims, Marine Biological Association, Plymouth, and the University of Southampton, for research on the behaviour, movements and ecology of threatened sharks that has contributed to worldwide conservation outcomes
- 2018 Annette Broderick, University of Exeter
- 2017 Sascha Hooker, University of St Andrews
- 2016 Richard Thompson, University of Plymouth
- 2015 Paul Thompson, University of Aberdeen
- 2014 Heather Koldewey, Zoological Society of London
- 2013 David Bilton, Plymouth University
- 2012 Alex D. Rogers, University of Oxford
- 2011 Brendan Godley, University of Exeter
- 2010 Stephen Ormerod, University of Cardiff
- 2009 Peter Mumby, University of Queensland

2008 Nicolas Dulvy, Simon Fraser University

2007 Simon Jennings, CEFAS

2006 Hal Whitehead

2005 Ian Boyd